² List call signs subject to any specific bid. Bidders may also submit multiple Bids for a single call sign (if proposing more than one alternative for transaction) or multiple bids for multiple call signs.

³ Note that generally Spectrum Rights Holders will make independent decisions, so Bidder should not include call signs licensed or leased to different parties in the same bid. Instead, Bidder should prepare separate bids for each Spectrum Rights Holder or each license.

⁴ EBS licenses may only be held by accredited academic institutions or by educational nonprofit organizations, so for most EBS licenses, the most practical transaction is a lease of spectrum rights. BRS licenses may be held directly by most businesses and individuals, so lease and purchase options are common.

⁵ Generally the lease or purchase negotiation process and FCC approval process will take at least 60 days, so the earliest practical date may be 6/1/2017.

⁶ Bidders are encouraged to identify a acceptable effective date well into the future because some licenses may be subject to an existing (expiring) lease.

⁷ Spectrum leases often have an initial term that extends until a) the next renewal date for the license, or b) between 5 and 10 years.

⁸ The FCC limits EBS spectrum leases to a maximum total term of 30 years, so this number may not exceed 30 years. This entry is required for a lease offer, but not relevant to a purchase.

¹⁰ This entry is required for a lease, but not for a simple purchase.

¹² FCC EBS licenses requirements call for a fraction of the capacity of the license to be used for educational purposes, so most EBS leases include either Service Credits or included (free) accounts that allow the EBS holder to use the wireless system created by the EBS operator for educational purposes. Amounts vary, but a typical lease will include at least $200 per month in service credits or five free accounts.
